The energy crisis, which has been significantly intensified by the war in Ukraine, affects us all, even in our daily lives. But people affected by poverty are particularly worried about the price of food and the energy supply for their daily needs. Europe is trying to diversify its energy supply, and so the African continent and also Tanzania are coming more and more into focus. In Tanzania, a large natural gas development of 10 million tons of liquefied natural gas is planned. Of this, 90% is earmarked for export to Europe and Asia. Is this the solution to the problem? What are the consequences of this? Or do we not have to think further in the face of the climate crisis? Since this topic concerns both partners, we also invite the representatives of the partnerships in Tanzania. ■

Cordial invitation!

The country seminar will take place online as a Zoom event and will be held bilingually (German and English). It will be translated into the other language.
